Russian Rock Videos Are Headed For MTV

Russian rock videos are about to enter the MTV rotation, with the musicvid network planning to broadcast tapes from four Soviet bands.

Musicvids were shot on location in Leningrad by record producer-singer Joanna Stingray, who also recorded the four bands, smuggled the tapes out of the U.S.S.R., and assembled the just-released "Red Wave" showcase LP.

Groups set to appear on MTV are Kino, Aquarium, Alisa and Strange Games. All four acts are "unofficial" Soviet bands that have not been approved by government authorities.
